Motown magic

40 years of music, a lifetime of memories

By Gary Graff Journal Music Writer

In his autobiography, "To Be Loved," Berry Gordy Jr. writes about the celebration in the Detroit streets after Joe Louis defeated Max Schmeling in a 1938 boxing match. "How could I ever do anything in my life that could make this many people happy?" Gordy writes.

He founded Motown.

The legendary record label celebrates its 40th anniversary this week (it actually marks four decades since he founded his song publishing company, Jobete) with a two-part TV documentary, "Motown 40: The Music is Forever" and a compilation album "Motown 40 Forever." During the next few days we'll be reminded of what Gordy and his cohorts achieved, starting in the house known as Hitsville on West Grand Boulevard and expanding into a global entertainment enterprise.

It's a success story of massive proportions. Motown gave us great entertainers and great music, artistry that helped unite a racially divided country. Motown was the world's most successful black-owned company, a symbol and a cultural icon whose impact remains an inspiration around the world. It's a company that put us on "Cloud Nine" and had us "Dancin' in the Streets," "Going to a Go-Go" and hearing things through the grapevine.

Motown is not what it once was. The company headquarters left Detroit in 1972 and its fortunes gradually dwindled, though its catalog of hits remains a marketer's dream. Gordy sold Motown in 1988 but remains chairman emeritus working with the current owner, PolyGram, which is in the midst of trying to bolster the imprint while at the same time fully exploiting its history with albums and ventures such as the Motown cafe.

Hitsville, meanwhile, remains a shrine, at 2648 West Grand Blvd.

here are a lot of ways to tell the Motown story, but nobody tells it quite like the participants themselves. So sit back, put on some Tempts and Tops and let Gordy and other members of the Motown family tell you how they did the things they did:

Berry Gordy: Detroit has always been extremely close to me. That's where my roots are, where I got my feeling, my upbringing. I've always thought of it as kind of a country town, where the people are so wonderful. When I was growing up, you could get food in Detroit from any family, if you were hungry.

Kim Weston, Motown singer: Detroit has always been a mecca of music. One of my schoolteachers was Mr. George Shirley, who was the first black tenor in the Metropolitan Opera.

Smokey Robinson, Motown singer, songwriter and producer: People ask me ... "Why were there so many talented people in Detroit?" ... I guarantee you that all over the world, in every little township, every little village, every little city, every big city, there is an abundant amount of talent. But the difference in Detroit was ... Berry Gordy. We had a man there who had a vision, who had a dream, and he had whatever fortitude ... it took to make a thing like that happen.

Berry Gordy: When I heard Smokey first sing was when I was a writer for Jackie Wilson. I had no company. I was just a writer and I was in an office, writing a song for Jackie, and Smokey and (the Miracles) came in to audition for Jackie Wilson's manager, and I just happened to be sitting there ... And after they sang three or four songs, they were rejected, and I thought they were just the cutest, the greatest, the most inspired ...

Claudette Robinson, the Miracles: Many people were not aware that the Miracles were the very first group ever to sign a contract for Berry Gordy and Motown Records. We were the only group that was around at the time with Berry. The only other artist at the time was Eddie Holland. We're talking about 1957.

Berry Gordy: They were dejected, and they were walking out. ... I left after them and talked to them in the hallway and told them how great they are. And when they found out I was Berry Gordy, Smokey had been studying the labels of Jackie Wilson, and I was a big star to him, and so I felt like I was somebody special. It was important for me to play the act of being more important.

Claudette Robinson: In the early days, Berry was like his own distributor, basically, taking the records around to the disc jockeys to get them played. He also had to pawn his suits so he could get money for recording sessions for us.

Berry Gordy: The distributors sold a lot of records, but there were other companies and they would have to pay everybody, so they'd pay the hottest company ... and we would take what we could get and hope for another hit record.

Esther Edwards, Berry Gordy's sister, founder and chair of the Motown Historical Museum: $800 was a lot of money. I kept asking him "How are you going to pay it back? You don't have a job." He had quit his good job, $85 a week, at the Ford Motor factory, on the assembly line. He had three children. My sister Gwen told him she knew he could write songs, and that she was going to pay his child support for a year to give him a chance to get going.

Otis Williams, the Temptations:

Here comes a city that's noted for making primarily cars, and out of that here comes this entity such as Motown, with Berry at the head and all the talented people that were under Berry's guidance. I can only think that it was God's will wanting Motown to become the entity it has become.

Berry Gordy: My talent was looking at people and finding that magic, or talent — I thought everybody had it — and showing them how to bring it out. I was pretty cocky. I thought I could make a star out of anybody.

Martha Reeves, Martha & the Vandellas: Mary Wells had written a song and taken it to Berry Gordy, and Berry said, "You're a good singer. Sing it as opposed to just being the writer." And he discovered her when she was 14 years old.

be the cousin of Eddie and Brian Holland. Eddie was at the demo session; they didn't like the guy's material, but they liked my voice so they recommended that I come to Motown.

Martha Reeves: Berry was smart. He and Mickey Stephenson, my boss, went all round Detroit and signed the best of the jazz musicians and the best of the talent. Amateur shows were a big thing in Detroit. ... When Hastings, the street that was torn down for urban renewal, had movie houses on it, that's where we auditioned.

Berry Gordy: When "Please Mr. Postman" came, that was our first No. I record. ... If we had any one year when we didn't make a big profit, we would have gone out of business, because we were going from record to record during that period.

Martha Reeves: When I met him, he was a young man, not much older than us. He always looked like he had a dream in the back of his eyes. But he always had a plan; all we had to do was what he told us, just cooperate. He had in his mind a show business that none of us even knew about.

Levi Stubbs, the Four Tops: He was a genius as far as songs were concerned. He had that gift, and it was very subtle, cause that's a very frustrating position to be in, to try to get the best out of everybody, and a lot of times they never knew themselves what they had. I think he's a genius in that respect.

Esther Edwards: Berry had the skill to make strong men out of boys. He could also do the same for the girl singers. He was kind of a father figure — not that much older than the artists, but so many of them were from one-parent or no-parent homes. Smokey was 18 and his mother had died when he was 10, and he was raised by a sister who had 11 children.

Diana Ross, the Supremes: I was a very close friend of Smokey's niece, and I used to listen to Smokey rehearse in the basement. And then Smokey was the one who helped us get our first audition at Motown. And Berry just happened to be passing through, and he stopped and said, "Would you sing that song again?" I think we were doing "There Goes My Baby" or "The Nighttime Is Baby" or "The Nighttime Is the Right Time," and we were busy really trying to sell it. We were really singing our hearts out.

Berry Gordy: Diana's voice was not the greatest; she had sort of a little nasally sound. But ... she was so inspired with it, and so I wasn't crazy about the song, but I thought she was ... very good. I asked them what grade they were in, and she said she was in 12th grade, and they wanted to start singing right then. And I said "No, go to school. Get your education. When you graduate, come back and see me." And that's what happened. They came back.

Diana Ross: So I came back and I was his secretary during the summer.

Berry Gordy: And yes, she was very enthusiastic about being a singer. She would just really work at it. She was willing to pay the price. She said she was a great secretary, and would I give her a job. And I did. I think she lasted about three weeks.

Diana Ross: Of the first nine records we had out, we didn't have any hits. And Berry kind of stayed with us. And with every one of the artists, he kind of stuck with them through when it was difficult, when we were learning.

Claudette Robinson: I remember how long it took the Supremes to get a hit. ... it just wasn't happening for them. I think when they finally got a hit, everybody was really happy for them. I know I was.

Martha Reeves: Our first experience of traveling (with the Motortown Revue), it was rough. We were all from meager means. We went on the road with a 12-piece band, 10 acts and a Trailways bus. It broke down whenever it felt like it.

Claudette Robinson: For our first professional date at the Apollo Theatre, we made $750 for the week, and that was four or five of us plus our guitar player, and with that we had to buy our meals, we had to join the union, we had to pay for cleaning and our hotel bill and manage to get to the Apollo from Detroit. And when we came home, we actually had nothing left.

Rick James, Motown session musician and solo artist: You walk into this little house on West Grand Boulevard, and it didn't give the ambience ... that you were in a capital of some major corporation. You would never know—other than the people standing around are Marvin Gaye, the Isley Brothers, Stevie Wonder or somebody—that you're even in a studio of insurmountable fame and joy. Inside it was like a family atmosphere; everybody talked to each other. Everybody kicked around, everybody joked, everybody being an artist. You wanted to do whatever you could to make Motown become what it's become now.

Smokey Robinson: Hitsville was a unique place. ... When we came off of a 50 one-nighters tour and you'd be dead tired, rather than going home to get some rest ... everybody went there, because we knew that everybody was going to be there. We hung out there because it was a wonderful place to be.

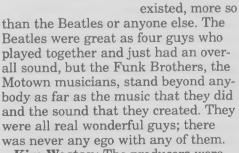

Martha Reeves: The juices were flowing. The energy was new and fresh. "Mickey's Monkey" was recorded on the spur of the moment; Smokey came up with this idea and came up to the lobby where everyone was sitting and hanging around. He said "Come on everybody, let's make a record!"

Otis Williams: The only real Miracle on that was Smokey. They couldn't find the other Miracles, I guess, so myself and some of the Vandellas and whoever else was around. ... We were pulling for anybody that was connected with Motown as artists and producers. The producer or songwriter would say, "Hey, we need somebody to clap their hands," or "We need some foot-stompers," and we would go in there and do it. Like on
"Try It, Baby," that's the Temptations behind Marvin Gaye. You would do whatever it would take to help people make it, as well as to help yourself make it

Diana Ross:
We were doing something that we loved. We probably at that time didn't have to be paid. We just wanted to sing and wanted to make music.

Otis Williams: You knew that here we are at a company that had a very different, special kind of vibe going for it — so much so that when the company closed at 6 o'clock, me and a few others would be there cleaning the floors, emptying the ashtrays in the trash cans and getting ready for the next day for people to come back and work. Now in most cases, you don't find artists doing something like that. But it was such a fun, loving place and with a family-orientated kind of feel, you just went beyond the call of

Berry Gordy: It was hard work. It was fierce competition. But it was a lot of hugging and kissing and stuff. It was just a time and place where it was all about the music.

Esther Edwards: They saw it as competition, but it was not competition because everybody supported everybody else. When one artist got a hit, everybody was so happy. They would help each other.

Diana Ross: (Gordy) not only made it so that we could sing our songs, and he wasn't just about making the record and making the money, but he taught us - or they put together a group of people that taught us.

Martha Reeves: The good thing about Motown is the fact we were groomed. We had music theory. We had choreography by Cholly Atkins. And Mrs. (Maxine) Powell definitely made a difference in all the ladies lives; she worked with some of the guys, too, but the finishing course she gave us allowed us to go anywhere in the world and be accepted.

Rick James: Marvin (Gaye) was telling me how they wanted him to go to that shit. I think he did go once or twice. He was saying it's the most ridiculous thing in the world.

Diana Ross: Even today, if I think about how I'm sitting .. Miss Powell taught us how to sit those legs in the right way when you're sitting in front of people.

Rick James: In essence it was a good thing. There's nothing wrong with learning a little etiquette ... how to walk right if you slump or how to order wines and eat right. Those kinds of things all proved beneficial ... cause a lot of these guys just came out of the ghettos and they were drinking Apple Ripple and Thunderbird, Cold Duck.

Martha Reeves: We were as active in the civil rights movement as any other organization. The difference is we didn't picket or march and parade. We got onstage and sang our music, and everybody fell in love.

Smokey Robinson: Diana Ross and the Supremes opened a lot of doors for the rest of us. They were almost like the entertainment guinea pigs. Berry saw something in them that, honestly, the rest of us didn't have. So he opened a lot of doors with

Martha Reeves: Anybody gets ticked off when they don't understand things. We had the best of the show business world because of the instruction. But you have to pay when you go. to college. There is a tuition. I feel that those who are angry do not understand that they had no money, when they went to Motown, and that the creative forces there did generate capital. However, it was Berry Gordy's capital

Levi Stubbs: If they were bitter, it was their fault, cause Berry had said things to them like "Don't spend your money so fast. Take your time. Let this money accumulate. You're not a millionaire just because you had a hit record." When a person that's been better off with the record thing if we had stayed in Detroit. There have been times when I felt it was stupid to come out here and get into something, even though we had successful movies like "Mahogany" and "Lady Sings the Blues." I wanted to be in the movie business and to do things out here and that was it. It was growth. So we gained the movie thing, but the record thing didn't go as well.

Berry Gordy and his Motown stars had lots to toast in the '60s.

poor all their lives all of a sudden has an opportunity to buy a car, a home, whatever, they tend to want to do it right then and there. They spend more money than they have ... and they feel like they have to blame somebody when what they should (do) is blame themselves.

Berry Gordy: In the early days, I was too busy moving forward to answer anything. I never liked the spotlight, never liked getting in front of the cameras to defend anything. Sometimes I think it was wise, and other times I think it might have been a mistake to not stop some of that stuff. But if I had, if I had taken the time to do that instead of working on the music, maybe Motown wouldn't have grown the way it did.

Esther Edwards: I really don't think that Berry Gordy would have ever moved if he had known how important we were in Detroit. We had over 450 staff employees at one time when we were there, but there was no Chamber of Commerce, no city people, mayors or anybody recognizing that.

Berry Gordy: We would have been Martha Reeves: There was a big outburst of tempers when the company moved. That hurt me cause I had a new little baby, an infant son. But that didn't stop me, because I had instructions, the things I was taught at Motown.

Berry Gordy: We were pioneers, and no one knew it would be successful. And when they found out it was, then that's when the competition got very, very heavy. And many other things happened in the '60s and '70s that have changed the whole system. The whole system changed.

Rick James: The Motown sound, by this particular time in the '70s, 1977 or so, had basically died. It hadn't died, but it was definitely calling for respiratory assistance. The Commodores and Stevie Wonder were the only original things that were coming out of Motown at that time, when I came on the scene. I was probably one of the last ones to hold it up. After me, it was all gone.

Smokey Robinson: I am no longer a Motown artist. But I feel like any artist that's ever been connected to

Motown, who became popular there, no matter where you go or what you do, people always associate you with

Rick James: There comes a time when music changes around you, and what happened with Motown was everybody wasn't able to make the change. When Sly & the Family Stone started to happen and Jimi (Hendrix) and the independent black thing and the "Hey, we don't have to wear the same suit" thing started ... the whole industry changed for black R&B performers. Motown just couldn't fit that genre anymore. They were trying to relive the '60s, and consequently it

Otis Williams: With any company, be it Motown or General Motors or IBM, you have fluctuation points. Motown is no different than all the other corporations that have gone through changes. Motown has done that and is still around, even though I must say Motown today is not the Motown I'm really well acquainted with from the '60s and early '70s. Berry Gordy: I listen to all of it. I was in the car .. and heard "Let's Get It On" by Marvin Gaye. I was amazed at how great it sounded.

Rick James: Berry will always be a genius. My take on him now is that he's enjoying life, but his eyes and his hands, contrary to popular belief, are still on Motown. I'll always believe that. That's like his child, and you never let your child go.

Berry Gordy: You have to remember, each one brings back such memories to me. I remember sitting at "Motown 25"; I would hear a song and I would be looking at the person singing it and see them in the past.

Martha Reeves: I imagine that God came along and sprinkled some blessings over 2648 W. Grand Blvd., because of the way everyone joined together and united and made a loving music that will last forever.

Rick James: The bottom line is that for 40 years, Motown stood tall among every record company and it gave more joy than any record company I can think of. It damn sure raised me, and it damn sure raised you.

Berry Gordy: After 40 years, to be respected and loved by these people is wonderful. The one thing about Motown people is that they have that love; like any family, we get mad, we get happy, we get this and that, but that love will always stay. That's what I did it all for, to be loved.

Gordy: 'That's what I did it all for, to be loved'

Berry Gordy: It was hard work. It was fierce competition. But it was a lot of hugging and kissing and stuff. It was just a time and place where it was all about the music.

Esther Edwards: They saw it as competition, but it was not competition because everybody supported everybody else. When one artist got a hit, everybody was so happy. They would help each other.

Diana Ross: (Gordy) not only made it so that we could sing our songs, and he wasn't just about making the record and making the money, but he taught us — or they put together a group of people that taught us.

Martha Reeves: The good thing about Motown is the fact we were groomed. We had music theory. We had choreography by Cholly Atkins. And Mrs. (Maxine) Powell definitely made a difference in all the ladies lives; she worked with some of the guys, too, but the finishing course she gave us allowed us to go anywhere in the world and be accepted.

Rick James: Marvin (Gaye) was telling me how they wanted him to go to that shit. I think he did go once or twice. He was saying it's the most ridiculous thing in the world.

Diana Ross: Even today, if I think about how I'm sitting .. Miss Powell taught us how to sit those legs in the right way when you're sitting in front of people.

Rick James: In essence it was a good thing. There's nothing wrong with learning a little etiquette ... how to walk right if you slump or how to order wines and eat right. Those kinds of things all proved beneficial ... cause a lot of these guys just came out of the ghettos and they were drinking Apple Ripple and Thunderbird, Cold Duck.

Martha Reeves: We were as active in the civil rights movement as any other organization. The difference is we didn't picket or march and parade. We got onstage and sang our music, and everybody fell in love.

Smokey Robinson: Diana Ross and the Supremes opened a lot of doors for the rest of us. They were almost like the entertainment guinea pigs. Berry saw something in them that, honestly, the rest of us didn't have. So he opened a lot of doors with

Martha Reeves: Anybody gets ticked off when they don't understand things. We had the best of the show business world because of the instruction. But you have to pay when you go. to college. There is a tuition. I feel that those who are angry do not understand that they had no money, when they went to Motown, and that the creative forces there did generate capital. However, it was Berry Gordy's capital.

Levi Stubbs: If they were bitter, it was their fault, cause Berry had said things to them like "Don't spend your money so fast. Take your time. Let this money accumulate. You're not a millionaire just because you had a hit record." When a person that's been

Tonight's two-hour anniversary salute "Motown 40: The Music is Forever" at 9 p.m. on ABC (Channel 7 in Detroit) can't hold a glove, jeweled or otherwise, to that unforgettable slice of TV history: too much talk, not enough original, compelling

It's fair to suggest that had there been no TV cameras, there might have been virtually no visual documentation of Motown's early, now-legendary artists as developing concert professionals. As Berry Gordy notes in "Motown 40," he really didn't understand the reason for having people such as choreographer Cholly Atkins or charm coach Maxine

Powell on the payroll, even though he signed the checks. Berry was about the business of making hit records, and hits in the 1960s were, by their nature, ephemeral things. He likely wouldn't have come out of his pocket to invest in a movie camera. But by making Motown's budding constellation of stars poised and cameraready, Gordy ensured that his acts would always be near the front of the line when the TV guest invitations were extended.

And in turn, the power of television helped influence countless numbers of awestruck viewers to use Motown as their pop music inspiration.

"The most important thing in the world that could happen in my teenage years," Luther Vandross says in the special, "was when the Supremes made their next appearance on Ed Sullivan."

"The Apostle" () Robert Duval is toweringly memorable as Sonny, a Pentecostal preacher with a bedeviled past. Duval, who wrote and directed this film as well, draws idiomatically perfect performances from the pros and nonpros in the cast. R. — Matt Black.

"Blues Brothers 2000" The gospel-rock sound track is wonderful, but the rest of this unwieldy sequel tips its heavy hand, trying to replace the late John Belushi with John Goodman, Joe Morton and J. Evan Bonifant. It needs to lose unfunny bulk. PG-13. — M. Black

"The Borrowers"

Kids:

Adults: John Goodman seems better utilized in "The Borrowers" than in the dismal "Blues Brothers 2000." But his enthusiasm for this material can't overcome the fact that "The Borrowers" has been done before, using an 8-year-old kid home alone and a pesky mouse. "The Borrowers" (based on the childrens' novel by Mary Norton) are 4 -inch people who live within the crawlspaces of houses. They utilize the things we take for granted such as paper clips, dental floss and buttons as survival gear. One particular family of Borrowers takes residence in the Lenders' house. Both families are forced out of their home by groveling lawyer Ocious P. Potter (Goodman) who is going to demolish it in order to make way for his own housing complex. The Borrowers take on Potter, which results in the usual physical comedy that entertains youngsters and becomes tedious to parents. "The Borrowers" is a special effects marvel, but knows its audience. The film has the decor to be set in the 1950s, but Potter whips out a goldplated cell phone to order the demolition team to the house. But such a subtle inconsistency will definitely fly over the kiddies who will be indulged with the fantasy. PG. - M. Banks.

"Live Flesh" ()

"Live Flesh" is the best film yet from Spain's Pedro Almodovar. Retaining his exuberant sense of style and attack, it satisfyingly deepens into the mature new artistry indicated by his last film, "The Flower of Passion."

Like that film, "Live Flesh" sends passion into a few unforeseen places

as a young man (Liberto Rabal) plots revenge on two cops in Madrid who jailed him after a fracas with an unresponsive rich girl (Francesca Neri) on drugs. He finds that the exchange of gunfire has paralyzed the younger and beefier of the two officers (Javier Bardem), who has become a wheelchair basketball star and has married the woman Rabal had been chasing. Chastened by guilt, she runs a day-care center when she isn't ministering to her

First, however, Rabal finds himself sliding into an affair with the unhappy wife (Angelina Molina) of the other cop's new partner. To his surprise, he finds sex liberating and mellowing. Still, he pines for his original flame and chases her, only to find his reaction to her is as ambivalent as hers is to him.

Sex is never simple in Almodovar's color-saturated films, but he believes in it and is determined to make it as healing as it is unpredictable and unmanageable. This means his film veers into a few byways unimagined in its source, Ruth Rendell's novel, but the director makes the mix tender, rambunctious and ultimately celebratory and winning. R. — Matt

"Four Days in September" ()

Bruno Barreto was well advised to wait long enough to acquire historical perspective before filming "Four Days in September" about the 1969 kidnapping in Barreto's native Brazil of the U.S. ambassador by students-turned-terrorists.

The film obviously identifies with the idealistic motivations of the amateur revolutionaries, catalyzed by a repressive military government. All it grants the government by way of humanity is that its chief torturer

He finds that the exchange of gunfire has paralyzed the younger and beefier of the two officers (Javier Bardem), who has become a wheelchair basketball star and has married the woman Rabal had been chasing. Chastened by guilt, she runs a day-care center when she isn't ministering to her

First, however, Rabal finds himself sliding into an affair with the unhappy wife (Angelina Molina) of the other cop's new partner. To his surprise, he finds sex liberating and mellowing. Still, he pines for his original flame and chases her, only to find his reaction to her is as ambivalent as hers is to him.

Sex is never simple in Almodovar's color-saturated films, but he believes in it and is determined to make it as healing as it is unpredictable and unmanageable. This means his film veers into a few byways unimagined in its source, Ruth Rendell's novel, but the director makes the mix tender, rambunctious and ultimately celebratory and winning. R. — Matt

Robby Hart (Sandler) is the dedicated wedding singer whose life takes a 180-degree turn when his fiancee stands him up at his own wedding. Council will hold a CONTINUATION OF THE ADJOURNED PUBLIC HEARING relative to the Mayoral Casino Gaming Bid Selections in the Council Committee Room, 13th Floor of the City-County Building on

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1998 from 6:00 p.m. until 8:00 p.m.

The 56 remaining individuals who submitted cards to speak by the conclusion of the hearing held Thursday, January 29, 1998 will be afforded an opportunity to be present and heard as to their views. Persons making oral presentations are encouraged to submit written copies to the City Clerk's Office for the record.

> Jackie L. Currie City Clerk

NOTICE TO THE HEARING IMPAIRED:

If you would like a sign language interpreter to be present at this public hearing, please call the Council's Research and Analysis Division at 224-4946 at least 24 hours before the scheduled hearing time.

To the News and Free Press - May your acts of evil bring Gannett and Knight Ridder a new year of upheaval. While the classified ad department usually stays out of these things, and we would never dream of editing a Biff or a Mimi, we question the latest Biff message, which misquotes Roger Miller. 'Scuse me while I kiss this guy" "She's got a tick in her eye, and she don't care" and my personal favorite, "The girl with colitis goes by." Send us your wrong song lyrics, and we'll let Biff know just where he went wrong.

Treats Need energy from down South Sweets

It's a sad day when Biff's ad copy is pirated from old Roger Miller songs. Do-wack-a-do-wack-a-do. Trailers for sale or rent. I'm proud to be an Okie from Muskogee. Rooms still at fifty cents. White lightnin's still the biggest thrill of all. No scab papers. We are all Biffs and Mimis on this

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Council will hold a CONTINUATION OF THE ADJOURNED PUBLIC HEARING relative to the Mayoral Casino Gaming Bid Selections in the Council Committee Room, 13th Floor of the City-County Building on WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1998 from 6:00 p.m. until 8:00 p.m.

The 56 remaining individuals who submitted cards to speak by the conclusion of the hearing held Thursday, January 29, 1998 will be afforded an opportunity to be present and heard as to their views. Persons making oral presentations are encouraged to submit written copies to the City Clerk's Office for the record.

> Jackie L. Currie City Clerk

NOTICE TO THE HEARING IMPAIRED:

If you would like a sign language interpreter to be present at this public hearing, please call the Council's Research and Analysis Division at 224-4946 at least 24 hours before the scheduled hearing time.

To the News and Free Press - May your acts of evil bring Gannett and Knight Ridder a new year of upheaval. While the classified ad department usually stays out of these things, and we would never dream of editing a Biff or a Mimi, we question the latest Biff message, which misquotes Roger Miller. 'Scuse me while I kiss this guy" "She's got a tick in her eye, and she don't care" and my personal favorite, "The girl with colitis goes by." Send us your wrong song lyrics, and we'll let Biff know just where he went wrong.

A BIG THANK YOU to the Shell Station on I-94 and Bellville Rd. for selling The Detroit Sunday Journal and not the scab papers sin one! - Joe. GO BELLVILLE!

APPRECIATION THANKS need to go to the Rochester Book Center in the Rochester Book Center in the Rochester Hills Plaza at 1410 Walton Road, just west of Livernois for continuing to sell the Detroit Sunday Journal. You are all terrific people. On behalf of all Locked-out Newspaper Workers, Thanks! —

U-M's Muckalt does it all

HARRIS, From Page 32

Canucks and not returning to Ann Arbor. But Michigan Coach Red Berenson is glad that he did return.

"I've never seen a player so totally dominant since I've been here," said Berenson earlier this season. "I mean everything: offensively, defensively and physically."

Hobey Baker Award voters are also taking notice. Muckalt is a candidate for the award, which goes to the nation's best collegiate hockey player. Last season Morrison — who's playing with the the New Jersey Devils' American Hockey League affiliate, the Albany River Rats — won the award.

A perfect example of Muckalt's versatility was his performance in the Wolverines' 4-1 victory over Lake Superior State at Joe Louis Arena Feb. 7. Though he didn't register a point, Muckalt worked tirelessly at both ends and delivered at least three bone-jarring hits.

"Obviously now I'm getting a lot of attention," he said, referring to opposition checkers. "Guys are following me and there's not much room. But I still have to help the team. If I can do that by creating room for other guys or playing physically, that's what I'll do."

Muckalt is also climbing the Wolverine statistical ladder. He's tied for 10th on the all-time goals list with 99, tied for 11th on the all-time assist list with 109 and tied for eighth on the all-time points list with 208.

U.S. soccer team shocks Brazil, 1-0

By Reginald McGhee Special to the Sunday Journal

When Predrag Radosavljevic, better known as Preki, launched a powerful kick that eluded the Brazilian goalie Claudio Taffarel in the 65th minute of the U.S. vs. Brazil Gold Cup match Tuesday in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the U.S. national soccer team reached a new level in international soccer competition.

With an outstanding performance from goalie Kasey Keller, the U.S. held a strong Brazilian team scoreless for a 1-0 victory before more than 12,000 fans. It was the Americans' first victory ever over Brazil.

Preki, the 1997 Major League Soccer MVP, also scored the winning goal in the 2-1 defeat of Costa Rica last Saturday.

The U.S. side goes to a dramatic showdown with Mexico today. The outcome will determine the champion of North and Central America and the Caribbean region.

Not since 1930 has the U.S. scored against the Brazilians, who won the 1994 World Cup and are strong favorites to repeat in the World Cup begining June 10 in France.

Since winning the World Cup in the U.S. four years ago, the powerful Brazilian side had compiled a 46-1-10 record before meeting the U.S.

Canucks and not returning to Ann Arbor. But Michigan Coach Red Berenson is glad that he did return.

"I've never seen a player so totally dominant since I've been here," said Berenson earlier this season. "I mean everything: offensively, defensively and physically."

Hobey Baker Award voters are also taking notice. Muckalt is a candidate for the award, which goes to the nation's best collegiate hockey player. Last season Morrison — who's playing with the the New Jersey Devils' American Hockey League affiliate, the Albany River Rats — won the award.

A perfect example of Muckalt's versatility was his performance in the Wolverines' 4-1 victory over Lake Superior State at Joe Louis Arena Feb. 7. Though he didn't register a point, Muckalt worked tirelessly at both ends and delivered at least three bone-jarring hits.

"Obviously now I'm getting a lot of attention," he said, referring to opposition checkers. "Guys are following me and there's not much room. But I still have to help the team. If I can do that by creating room for other guys or playing physically, that's what I'll do."

Muckalt is also climbing the Wolverine statistical ladder. He's tied for 10th on the all-time goals list with 99, tied for 11th on the all-time assist list with 109 and tied for eighth on the all-time points list with 208.

U.S. soccer team shocks Brazil, 1-0

By Reginald McGhee Special to the Sunday Journal

When Predrag Radosavljevic, better known as Preki, launched a powerful kick that eluded the Brazilian goalie Claudio Taffarel in the 65th minute of the U.S. vs. Brazil Gold Cup match Tuesday in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the U.S. national soccer team reached a new level in international soccer competition.

With an outstanding performance from goalie Kasey Keller, the U.S. held a strong Brazilian team scoreless for a 1-0 victory before more than 12,000 fans. It was the Americans' first victory ever over Brazil.

Preki, the 1997 Major League Soccer MVP, also scored the winning goal in the 2-1 defeat of Costa Rica last Saturday.

The U.S. side goes to a dramatic showdown with Mexico today. The outcome will determine the champion of North and Central America and the Caribbean region.

Not since 1930 has the U.S. scored against the Brazilians, who won the 1994 World Cup and are strong favorites to repeat in the World Cup begining June 10 in France.

Since winning the World Cup in the U.S. four years ago, the powerful Brazilian side had compiled a 46-1-10 record before meeting the U.S.

Pitchers throw their hats in the ring, hope to start

By Richard L. Shook Special to the Journal

The annual but never-ending battle has begun.

The new hopes that each baseball season brings begin with renewed competition for jobs.

This year's battle has started with the reporting of pitchers and catchers to the Detroit Tigers' spring training base in Lakeland, Fla.

There are seven candidates for the five slots in Manager Buddy Bell's starting rotation — Justin Thompson, Brian Moehler, Scott Sanders, Frank Castillo, Bryce Florie, Tim Worrell and Greg Keagle.

Two are certain to be disappointed 1998 Major League baseball spring training

The annual but never-ending battle has begun.

The new hopes that each baseball season brings begin with renewed competition for jobs.

This year's battle has started with the reporting of pitchers and catchers to the Detroit Tigers' spring training base in Lakeland, Fla.

There are seven candidates for the five slots in Manager Buddy Bell's starting rotation — Justin Thompson, Brian Moehler, Scott Sanders, Frank Castillo, Bryce Florie, Tim Worrell and Greg Keagle.

Two are certain to be disappointed before opening day. Which doesn't mean they'll be disappointed sites listed with reporting dates for pitchers/catchon May 1. Or April 15. ers and full squads. Or June 1.

State lawsuit payouts drop dramatically

By Eric Freedman

Journal Lansing Bureau

ANSING - The state shelled out $25.9 million last year in court settlements and lawsuits, the smallest amount in a half-decade and less than a quarter as much as the previous year.

At the same time, lawsuits against two major departments - Corrections and Transportation — cost taxpayers millions of dollars more than a year earlier, according to a new study by the Senate Fiscal Agency.

The payments totaled $25,894,694 and came in an array of suits alleging misconduct or negligence by state officials and employees. They ranged from job discrimination to breach of contract to police brutality to slipand-fall accidents on public property.

Judgments follow a decision by a judge or jury. Settlements are negoti-

Attorney General Frank Kelley's press secretary, Chris DeWitt, said recent changes in Michigan's tort negligence - law have had an impact on reducing the size of damage awards.

However, DeWitt cautioned, "It takes only a few large cases to throw those numbers back up.

The report identified five payouts of more than $1 million each in the fiscal year that ended Oct. 31, 1997:

■ An employee discrimination suit against Corrections that cost almost

■ A desegregation suit against the Education Department by the Benton Harbor Area School District, with $1.3 million paid for the year.

A suit alleging that Department of Natural Resources regulations deprived property owners of fair use of their land, costing $2.3 million.

■ Highway defect suits in St. Clair and Eaton counties, one for $1.3 million and the other for $2.1 million.

Many cases, especially those that go to trial and appeal, take years to conclude, according to Bill Bowerman, a Senate Fiscal Agency chief analyst who conducted the study. "This report reflects a history of what was paid during the year. Some of these cases take four or five years if they go through the system.

More than 40 of last year's 181 settlements and judgments involve claims of discrimination based on race, ethnicity, age, gender or handicap. And DeWitt described that trend as "certainly a growing concern as far as state money.'

Among the smallest payments was $90 from the State Police for withholding documents under the Freedom of Information law.

The money comes from a combination of sources including general tax revenue and specialized funds including those for highway construction, natural resources, fish and game, park improvement and the lottery.

Let there be peace...

With bowed heads and heavy hearts, some 50 peace activists gathered in front of the McNamara Federal Building in downtown Detroit Wednesday to pray for a peaceful settlement to the crisis in Iraq. The Detroit demonstration, sponsored by Interfaith Action for Peace, was one of at least 30 vigils held around the country. Among those leading prayers here were Imam Abdul Al-Amin of the Muslim Center in Detroit, the Rev. Ed Rowe of Central Methodist Church and Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, who was arrested at a protest rally Thursday in Washington, D.C. See Story on page 7.

The largest-ever single payout in state history came a year earlier when Natural Resources paid $90.5 million to the owners of natural gas

here was the right when we needed it?

boss, Congressman John Conyers Jr., recently released a batch of formerly private documents that clearly show how tobacco companies zeroed in on the black population and spent millions and millions of dollars to attract them — us — to certain brands of cigarettes.

It worked.

Today blacks are among the heaviest smokers in the country. So are American Indians and Hispanics. These groups smoke more, get sick more and die more. Much to the delight of the corporate bean counters in the tobacco companies, these groups fattened the coffers of tobacco companies while puffing themselves to an early grave.

The tobacco companies spared no expense in targeting blacks. They filled inner-city billboards with cigarette advertising. They became a major source of revenue for blackowned and minority-oriented newspapers. They promoted their brands on the sides of buses and in subway stations. They sponsored jazz festivals and art exhibits. And, according to the internal documents released during recent congressional hearings, the makers of Kool cigarettes even talked about producing a cheap basketball bearing the Kool colors. What a combination! Slam dunking and chain smoking.

It comes as no surprise that the companies actually focused on blacks and other so-called minorities.
But I am puzzled by one thing.

I can't figure out why all those groups that are having a hissy fit over affirmative action programs that target minorities for higher education opportunities aren't similarly upset about the way the tobacco industry targeted minorities for death?

Oh sure, I know everyone is entitled to pick her own cause, to decide which pony to ride. But isn't it odd that when that inner-city black kid who grew up amid a sea of liquor and cigarette billboards finally gets a chance to go to college, he is slapped in the face by those who would, in the twisted name of equality, take away his chance at success? I'm not talking about student athletes who are wooed because of their prowess in sports. I'm talking about a kid who took college prep courses when his friends were taking shop, a kid who beat the odds and graduated from high school. He's being attacked on one side by the massive cigarette and booze industry and on the other by anti-affirmative action

Right now conservative ideologues

have set their sights on the University of Michigan's affirmative action program. Their argument is that better qualified whites have been denied admission in favor of lesser qualified blacks. This argument assumes a lot of things, including the existence of a level-playing field or a starting line that is the same for both blacks and

That is not true. It is not true today; it wasn't true when I was a kid. And with the widening gap between rich and poor, I wonder if it will ever be

Our nation accepts squalid inner cities. It accepts substandard schools in inner city areas. It accepts poverty. It accepts crack pipes and heroin needles just as long as they are confined to "those" areas. It accepts and provides the props to maintain a twotiered society.

Just about the only thing it doesn't accept is responsibility. That just goes up in smoke.

U.S. slow to make an impression at Olympics

Hey everyone,

Trying to stay up with the Olympic television coverage can be a tough sport, but not too tough for Sunday Journal's Couch Potato. It takes years of training, and it's hard not to peak at a big event such as this year's Super Bowl. But this spud has put in the hours on the sofa with the remote in one hand and a bag of Cheetos in the other, so Couch Potato humbly offers some highlights and lowlights from the Olympics thus far:

- Was anyone else getting a little nervous after the first few days? It was beginning to look like they weren't going to need the American national anthem in Nagano.
- It was expected that snowboarding's debut at the Olympics would be exciting but no one could have imagined the drama that Couch Potato calls "Tokingate." Canada's Ross Bebagliati won the first gold medal in the sport, then tested positive for marijuana and was stripped of the medal by the International Olympic Committee only to win it back on appeal within days. In his defense Bebagliati said he tested positive from exposure to second-hand smoke at a party several weeks before the Olympics. That means he'll go down in history with President Bill Clinton as one of the two most famous people to use the "did not inhale" defense. That said, it didn't seem that Bebagliati's punishment fit the crime of having a few nanograms above the limit in his test. Couch Potato is glad that his medal was returned. Hope he's smart enough to put in some community service in drug awareness when the smoke (so to speak) dies down.

The American snowboarding team showed up with way cool black and white Spiderman jumpsuits. Unfortunately for the women's team, the suits weren't equipped with Spiderman webbing devices that might have kept them on the course in the giant slalom, and three failed to complete their runs. After the U.S. teams were shut out in the first two events, Shannon Dunn and Ross Powers won bronze medals in the women's and men's halfpipe.

■ OK! Enough with the horn blowing at all the outdoor events already! The skiing events all sound as if they were taking place on New Year's Eve.

■ CBS coverage so far is a fine illustration of programming by committee.

Obviously some demographic stat told the committee that audiences will only tune in to figure skating, so now we are forced to watch coverage of rehearsals in prime time while there are plenty of actual Olympic events that are ignored. Also, it seems that there is no cross-country skiing at the Olympics, according to CBS. And if you want to hear curling mentioned, you have to check in with Dave Letterman's mom on his "Late Night" show.

And sorry, but the CBS late-night pair of Michele Tafoya and Al Trautwig are lame enough to put an insomniac under. The only breath of life in the late-night broadcast is MTV's Kennedy. Couch Potato's favorite highlight was of her in a Godzilla costume singing karaoke in a Nagano pub. Now that's entertainment!

■ Where CBS definitely wins is in graphics, particularly their spots that feature the ergo-man skiers on the virtual slopes.

And now back to figure skating. Many thought that U.S. pair Kyoko Ina and Jason Dungjen's marks were too low after they skated a strong short program - particularly after the Russian pair of Yelena Berezhnaya and Anton Sikharulidze fell on a triple and still landed ahead of them in the standings. While CBS's Scott Hamilton never got off the fence and told it like was, the Canadian broadcasters said Ina and Dungjen were robbed. Actually, maybe Hamilton knows what Couch Potato knows — that when you remove the mandatory deductions for Ino's and Dungjen's not being Russian, their marks were right where they should been. Berezhnaya Sikharulidze went on to stumble their way to the silver medal, while Ina and Dungjen finished fourth. Why not just mail out the medals before the competition and save all that trouble?

Quick, blink your eyes. That blink took longer than the 1/100 of a second that was the difference between Picabo Street's gold medal time in the women's Super G (1:18.02) and the time of silver medalist Michaele Dorfmeister of Austria (1:18.03). It was fun watching the ebullient Street fly down the course in her tiger-head helmet, then wait impatiently at the bottom to see if her time held — and equally refreshing watching her sing along with the national anthem at the medal ceremo-

Week two highlights: NHL players take the Olympic spotlight for the first time in men's hockey and Michelle Kwan and Tara Lipinski of the United States head the field in women's figure skating. The second week will also feature ice dancing, bobsledding and, in skiing, the men's and women's giant skilledoms

What a shame that Gov. John Engler could not have dropped ideology for a few moments to have gotten involved at appropriate points in attempting to end the Detroit newspaper strike and lockout. Because of this issue and too many others like it, Gov. Engler could stand to visit a Webster's and look up the word "statesman." He also might have considered for a second what another Republican, former Gov. Bill Milliken, would have done at the outset of this strike. Milliken would have attempted to help resolve it — to all parties' benefit...

Should be interesting to see how many people begin coming out to the ballpark this season just to say goodbye to Tiger Stadium. It's still a couple of years before the wrecking ball arrives, but two seasons of baseball fly by so rapidly that the sentiment already seems to have started. The Tiger Stadium Fan Club is free to wonder: Why this sudden burst of affection for something they have loved all along? Toughest response is explaining how some of us could simultaneously love that great ballpark and still believe in the need for a new one...

Some of us who voted twice for Bill Clinton will also tell you in a heartbeat that we believe him to be an egregious womanizer and liar. With Clinton it was never a matter of voting for the reincarnation of James Madison. It was a matter of policies: environment, good Supreme Court nominees, civil rights enforcement, common sense on balancing a budget, etc. No, a voter should not have to pay such a slimy price for seeing that things so basic are attended to. That having been said, if it is found that Clinton is shredding the truth — again — to the extent that at this stage seems obvious with respect to Lewinsky, he ought to resign. There are limits on this public vs. private curtain when it comes to presidential conBest performance by anyone in television has been turned in during the past month by the Today Show's Matt Lauer. It isn't only that he handled the Hillary Clinton interview with such poise. His partner, Katie Couric, has been on bereavement leave, and Lauer has been forced to tackle everything from the White House to Iraq, which he has done with command and clarity. Lauer has a way of achieving what Walter Cronkite did 30 years ago: He builds trust with an audience...

Back to sports: Spring training begins this week. It's baseball season. It's a great antidote when you've heard the name "Kenneth Starr" once too

In his defense Bebagliati said he tested positive from exposure to second-hand smoke at a party several weeks before the Olympics. That means he'll go down in history with President Bill Clinton as one of the two most famous people to use the "did not inhale" defense. That said, it didn't seem that Bebagliati's punishment fit the crime of having a few nanograms above the limit in his test. Couch Potato is glad that his medal was returned. Hope he's smart enough to put in some community service in drug awareness when the smoke (so to speak) dies down.

■ The American snowboarding team showed up with way cool black and white Spiderman jumpsuits. Unfortunately for the women's team, the suits weren't equipped with Spiderman webbing devices that might have kept them on the course in the giant slalom, and three failed to complete their runs. After the U.S. teams were shut out in the first two events, Shannon Dunn and Ross Powers won bronze medals in the women's and men's halfpipe.

■ OK! Enough with the horn blowing at all the outdoor events already! The skiing events all sound as if they were taking place on New Year's Eve.

CBS coverage so far is a fine illustration of programming by committee.

Obviously some demographic stat told the committee that audiences will only tune in to figure skating, so now we are forced to watch coverage of rehearsals in prime time while there are plenty of actual Olympic events that are ignored. Also, it seems that there is no cross-country skiing at the Olympics, according to CBS. And if you want to hear curling mentioned, you have to check in with Dave Letterman's mom on his "Late Night" show.

And sorry, but the CBS late-night pair of Michele Tafoya and Al Trautwig are lame enough to put an insomniac under. The only breath of life in the late-night broadcast is MTV's Kennedy. Couch Potato's favorite highlight was of her in a Godzilla costume singing karaoke in a Nagano pub. Now that's entertainment!

■ Where CBS definitely wins is in graphics, particularly their spots that feature the ergo-man skiers on the virtual slopes.

And now back to figure skating. Many thought that U.S. pair Kyoko Ina and Jason Dungjen's marks were too low after they skated a strong short program - particularly after the Russian pair of Yelena Berezhnaya and Anton Sikharulidze fell on a triple and still landed ahead of them in the standings. While CBS's Scott Hamilton never got off the fence and told it like was, the Canadian broadcasters said Ina and Dungjen were robbed. Actually, maybe Hamilton knows what Couch Potato knows — that when you remove the mandatory deductions for Ino's and Dungjen's not being Russian, their marks were right where they should been. Berezhnaya Sikharulidze went on to stumble their way to the silver medal, while Ina and Dungjen finished fourth. Why not just mail out the medals before the competition and save all that trouble?

■ Quick, blink your eyes. That blink took longer than the 1/100 of a second that was the difference between Picabo Street's gold medal time in the women's Super G (1:18.02) and the time of silver medalist Michaele Dorfmeister of Austria (1:18.03). It was fun watching the ebullient Street fly down the course in her tiger-head helmet, then wait impatiently at the bottom to see if her time held — and equally refreshing watching her sing along with the national anthem at the medal ceremo-

■ Week two highlights: NHL players take the Olympic spotlight for the first time in men's hockey and Michelle Kwan and Tara Lipinski of the United States head the field in women's figure skating. The second week will also feature ice dancing, bobsledding and, in skiing, the men's and women's giant

What a shame that Gov. John Engler could not have dropped ideology for a few moments to have gotten involved at appropriate points in attempting to end the Detroit newspaper strike and lockout. Because of this issue and too many others like it, Gov. Engler could stand to visit a Webster's and look up the word "statesman." He also might have considered for a second what another Republican, former Gov. Bill Milliken, would have done at the outset of this strike. Milliken would have attempted to help resolve it - to all parties' benefit..

Should be interesting to see how many people begin coming out to the ballpark this season just to say goodbye to Tiger Stadium. It's still a couple of years before the wrecking ball arrives, but two seasons of baseball fly by so rapidly that the sentiment already seems to have started. The Tiger Stadium Fan Club is free to wonder: Why this sudden burst of affection for something they have loved all along? Toughest response is explaining how some of us could simultaneously love that great ballpark and still believe in the need for a new one...

Some of us who voted twice for Bill Clinton will also tell you in a heartbeat that we believe him to be an egregious womanizer and liar. With Clinton it was never a matter of voting for the reincarnation of James Madison. It was a matter of policies: environment, good Supreme Court nominees, civil rights enforcement, common sense on balancing a budget, etc. No, a voter should not have to pay such a slimy price for seeing that things so basic are attended to. That having been said, if it is found that Clinton is shredding the truth — again — to the extent that at this stage seems obvious with respect to Lewinsky, he ought to resign. There are limits on this public vs. private curtain when it comes to presidential con-

Best performance by anyone in television has been turned in during the past month by the Today Show's Matt Lauer. It isn't only that he handled the Hillary Clinton interview with such poise. His partner, Katie Couric, has been on bereavement leave, and Lauer has been forced to tackle everything from the White House to Iraq, which he has done with command and clarity. Lauer has a way of achieving what Walter Cronkite did 30 years ago: He builds trust with an audience...

Back to sports: Spring training begins this week. It's baseball season. It's a great antidote when you've heard the name "Kenneth Starr" once too

State lawsuit payouts drop dramatically

By Eric Freedman

Journal Lansing Bureau

ANSING - The state shelled out $25.9 million last year in court settlements and lawsuits, the smallest amount in a half-decade and less than a quarter as much as the previous year.

At the same time, lawsuits against two major departments - Corrections and Transportation — cost taxpayers millions of dollars more than a year earlier, according to a new study by the Senate Fiscal Agency.

The payments totaled $25,894,694 and came in an array of suits alleging misconduct or negligence by state officials and employees. They ranged from job discrimination to breach of contract to police brutality to slipand-fall accidents on public property.

Judgments follow a decision by a judge or jury. Settlements are negoti-

Attorney General Frank Kelley's press secretary, Chris DeWitt, said recent changes in Michigan's tort negligence - law have had an impact on reducing the size of damage awards.

However, DeWitt cautioned, "It takes only a few large cases to throw those numbers back up.

The report identified five payouts of more than $1 million each in the fiscal year that ended Oct. 31, 1997:

■ An employee discrimination suit against Corrections that cost almost

■ A desegregation suit against the Education Department by the Benton Harbor Area School District, with $1.3 million paid for the year.

A suit alleging that Department of Natural Resources regulations deprived property owners of fair use of their land, costing $2.3 million.

■ Highway defect suits in St. Clair and Eaton counties, one for $1.3 million and the other for $2.1 million.

Many cases, especially those that go to trial and appeal, take years to conclude, according to Bill Bowerman, a Senate Fiscal Agency chief analyst who conducted the study. "This report reflects a history of what was paid during the year. Some of these cases take four or five years if they go through the system.

More than 40 of last year's 181 settlements and judgments involve claims of discrimination based on race, ethnicity, age, gender or handicap. And DeWitt described that trend as "certainly a growing concern as far as state money.'

Among the smallest payments was $90 from the State Police for withholding documents under the Freedom of Information law.

The money comes from a combination of sources including general tax revenue and specialized funds including those for highway construction, natural resources, fish and game, park improvement and the lottery.

Let there be peace...

With bowed heads and heavy hearts, some 50 peace activists gathered in front of the McNamara Federal Building in downtown Detroit Wednesday to pray for a peaceful settlement to the crisis in Iraq. The Detroit demonstration, sponsored by Interfaith Action for Peace, was one of at least 30 vigils held around the country. Among those leading prayers here were Imam Abdul Al-Amin of the Muslim Center in Detroit, the Rev. Ed Rowe of Central Methodist Church and Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, who was arrested at a protest rally Thursday in Washington, D.C. See Story on page 7.

The largest-ever single payout in state history came a year earlier when Natural Resources paid $90.5 million to the owners of natural gas

here was the right when we needed it?

boss, Congressman John Conyers Jr., recently released a batch of formerly private documents that clearly show how tobacco companies zeroed in on the black population and spent millions and millions of dollars to attract them — us — to certain brands of cigarettes.

It worked.

Today blacks are among the heaviest smokers in the country. So are American Indians and Hispanics. These groups smoke more, get sick more and die more. Much to the delight of the corporate bean counters in the tobacco companies, these groups fattened the coffers of tobacco companies while puffing themselves to an early grave.

The tobacco companies spared no expense in targeting blacks. They filled inner-city billboards with cigarette advertising. They became a major source of revenue for blackowned and minority-oriented newspapers. They promoted their brands on the sides of buses and in subway stations. They sponsored jazz festivals and art exhibits. And, according to the internal documents released during recent congressional hearings, the makers of Kool cigarettes even talked about producing a cheap basketball bearing the Kool colors. What a combination! Slam dunking and chain smoking.

It comes as no surprise that the companies actually focused on blacks and other so-called minorities.
But I am puzzled by one thing.

I can't figure out why all those groups that are having a hissy fit over affirmative action programs that target minorities for higher education opportunities aren't similarly upset about the way the tobacco industry targeted minorities for death?

Oh sure, I know everyone is entitled to pick her own cause, to decide which pony to ride. But isn't it odd that when that inner-city black kid who grew up amid a sea of liquor and cigarette billboards finally gets a chance to go to college, he is slapped in the face by those who would, in the twisted name of equality, take away his chance at success? I'm not talking about student athletes who are wooed because of their prowess in sports. I'm talking about a kid who took college prep courses when his friends were taking shop, a kid who beat the odds and graduated from high school. He's being attacked on one side by the massive cigarette and booze industry and on the other by anti-affirmative action

have set their sights on the University of Michigan's affirmative action program. Their argument is that better qualified whites have been denied admission in favor of lesser qualified blacks. This argument assumes a lot of things, including the existence of a level-playing field or a starting line that is the same for both blacks and

That is not true. It is not true today; it wasn't true when I was a kid. And with the widening gap between rich and poor, I wonder if it will ever be

Our nation accepts squalid inner cities. It accepts substandard schools in inner city areas. It accepts poverty. It accepts crack pipes and heroin needles just as long as they are confined to "those" areas. It accepts and provides the props to maintain a twotiered society.

Just about the only thing it doesn't accept is responsibility. That just goes up in smoke.

PGA ruling isn't fair, but won't kill golf

It's February. It's the dullest month of the sports year. It's the reason Sports Illustrated does a swimsuit issue. It's the reason why we're not going to be terribly worried if this highly erratic list of random thoughts today drifts to subjects other than sports ...

Surprising ruling allowing Casey Martin to use a golf cart if he qualifies for PGA Tour events. The thinking here was that he would lose, for sure. But I don't hear a lot of undue grumbling, and there will be a minimum of it from this corner. The guy is talented. He has a leg that's going to be amputated. Yes, it turns the competitive structure of tournament golf on its ear to allow a guy to ride. And, no, he should not have been allowed such an unfair advantage in a sport that is heavily affected by the fatigue factor. But Casey Martin won't destroy the game of golf. The surprise is that the judge ruled that a PGA Tour golf course is a "public accommodation" that opened it to regulation by the Americans With Disabilities Act. "That what makes Billy such a great player," said fellow Wolverine senior Matt Herr. "Even when he's not scoring goals, he's out there working hard."

And though the Wolverines have gotten outstanding contributions from their freshmen, Muckalt is a big reason for their 17-4-1 CCHA record (first with 35 points) and 23-6-1 overall mark.

Coming into this season, Muckalt, Herr and senior goalie Marty Turco were the only big contributors left after the devastating Class of '97 graduated. It included Brendan Morrison, Jason Botterill, John Madden, Mike Legg, Warren Luhning, Blake Sloan and Harold Schock.

In the first game of the season, Muckalt, a right wing from Williams Lake, British Columbia, was really put on the spot when Herr was injured.

Five workers who returned to Detroit Newspapers and the Detroit Free Press during 1997 tell how it felt:

JACK WORSTER is pressroom chairman for Graphic Arts International Union Local 13N at the Riverfront printing plant in downtown Detroit. He began working at the Detroit News in 1973.

"For me it's a challenge. I have to keep my eyes and ears open every minute of the day. I have to be watching what happens to everyone else in the pressroom.'

Worster sees his role as defending Local 13's contractual rights, although there is no current contract. "Every time they do something that doesn't live up to their own imposed conditions, I file a grievance. I have filed more than 130 grievances. ... We've had two replacement workers go home sick. I'm a GA — a general assignment reporter. We work at night. We sweep up after the elephants. That's how I look at it. But I've adjusted to it. I love the paycheck.

"I found the work physically very demanding for a man my age, 62. That work was pretty strenuous for a guy who had had a heart attack on the picket line. We used to rotate the hard jobs and the easy jobs. Well, they stopped all the rotating of the inserting jobs, which put you into a hard, monotonous operation. ...

"They put us on operations that we used pass out to the lowest-seniority employees. If the intent was to wear me down and get me out the door, they succeeded.

"There were no threats from either management or replacement workers. They did not treat you particularly badly because you were union people. They just treated you like they had never seen you before.

"It would seem that everyone you talk to there has feelers out, even management people. I think the ones who would admit it know there is no job security. The paper is in decline. They are putting out a poor product in a heavy union area where the people know what they're up to."

A year later, workers trickle in

By Alan Forsyth

t's been one year this weekend since the six newspaper locals on strike against the Detroit News, the Free Press and Detroit Newspapers made unconditional offers to return to work.

At the time, Al Derey, chair of the Metropolitan Council of Newspaper Unions, predicted the papers would claim they were abiding by the offers and take back only a few workers while trumpeting their "strike is over" message

He was right on.

Only some 420 strikers are back at work. In December the newspapers estimated that 890 union members remained on recall lists.

The unions put the figure much higher and include workers that the company excludes, such as those who were offered jobs but elected to wait until all union members are reinstated; union members who turned down jobs that were not comparable to their positions before the strike, and 200 strikers fired for alleged picketline misconduct.

In addition, wage levels were slashed for some workers when the DN imposed contract conditions on three unions last March. Most notably, the hourly wage for mailers members of Teamsters Local 2040 was reduced from $16 to $8.

In some categories not a single job has been offered. Before the strike, which started July 13, 1995, there were 290 circulation district managers, members of Teamsters Local 372. Not one has been recalled. There were 50 warehousemen, also members of 372. None have been recalled.

The Detroit News has reinstated 11 workers and the Free Press, 27.

When the labor dispute started, some 2,500 union members went on strike; about 400-500 of them crossed picket lines to return to work.

Eventually even the option of crossing the line disappeared as the newspapers hired an estimated 1,400 replacement workers.

Gannett Co., owner of the News, and Knight Ridder, owner of the Free Press, are equal partners in Detroit Newspapers, which handles noneditorial functions. Gannett and Knight Ridder are the two largest American newspaper chains.

New ruling

U. S. District Judge Paul Gadola recently that Detroit Newspapers can proceed in federal court with 13 allegations of picket line violence by newspaper workers. He dismissed one of the allegations.

The papers claim the activities amount to organized crime.

Last February Gadola dismissed scores of similar allegations against the unions. Much of the picketing in question was conducted at the Sterling Heights printing plant.

ody artists from around the country hit the tattoo convention last week end at Cobo Hall and they weren't lacking for customers, admirers — or curious stares. "They were cranking them out pretty well," said one of the promoters, Mike Jeziak, owner of Ink Slingers in Roseville. "I've never seen a tattoo convention with so many people." Guns N' Roses drummer Steven Adler brought his new band and played for the crowd.

Gumbleton arrested in D.C. protest rally

Special to the Journal

WASHINGTON — Detroit Catholic Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Gumbleton and 25 others were arrested Thursday outside the White House during a rally to protest contemplated U.S. bombing of Iraq.

They were held briefly by on a misdemeanor charge of demonstrating without a permit and released.

A busload of Detroiters helped swell the ranks of protesters.

The Detroiters came from the group Peace Action, Central United Methodist Church and the area's Chaldean community. Chaldeans are Iraqi Christians.

The rally was held on the seventh anniversary of the U.S. bombing of a bomb shelter in Amaryiah, Iraq. An estimated 1,200-1,500 people were killed in the bombing, Gumbleton said, most of them children, women and elderly men.

The war continues in the form of U.N. economic sanctions imposed on Iraq in 1990, soon after Iraq invaded Kuwait, Gumbleton said. "It's unbearable what they're experiencing at the hands of the United States," he said.

In talking Wednesday night with Detroit-area physician Joseph Kassab, whose brother is a Catholic archbishop in Iraq, Gumbleton learned of the death of the archbishop's 3-year-old grandnephew. The boy fell, injured himself and died in an Iraqi hospital. "There was no way to treat this youngster" due to the lack of medical supplies caused by the embargo, Gumbleton said.

"Nothing worthwhile in Iraq will be accomplished through violence," Gumbleton said. "Many good and beautiful things can be accomplished through an act of love."

Gumbleton said a liquids-only fast he began Jan. 20 to call attention the sanctions against Iraq would end by Sunday, when he is scheduled to visit Mexico's Chiapas state, which has been troubled by civil unrest.

Bill Goode, UAW activist

Bill Goode, former director of the UAW Education Department and the UAW's Walter and May Reuther Family Education Center at Black Lake, Mich., died Monday in his Detroit home. He was 73.

Born in Detroit, he earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from Wayne State University and his doctorate from Rutgers University.

From 1973 until his retirement in the late 1980s, he was dean of the Labor College of Empire State College in New York City.

Mr. Goode became a member of UAW Local 400 in 1951 while working as an assembler at the old Ford Highland Park plant. While at Local 400, he served on the Executive Board and as a plant committeeman.

He was in charge of Wayne State University's Labor Studies Center at obituaries

the Institute of Labor and industrial Relations in the early 1960s, and was appointed to the staff of the UAW Education Department in 1964. Four years later he went to the Teamsters union as director of labor education.

Mr. Goode returned to the UAW in 1971 as education director and later director of the Black Lake education center where he remained until 1773.

Even in his retirement, Mr. Goode strongly supported the Detroit newspaper strikers in their struggle for a decent contract.

Survivors include a daughter, Julia Goode; two sons, Daniel and David; their mother, Selma Goode; eight grandchildren, a brother and his companion Susan Salmansohn.

Legislation that will hurt workers, families and children

These bills would give counties total control of funds and services to state wards and their families. The county currently provides services and attempts to curtail delinquent behavior BEFORE they become state wards. The children become state wards AFTER the efforts of the county have proven unsuccessful.

Passage of these bills could result in:

- ➤ Inconsistent and disparate service and treatment from county to county;
- > Returning "at risk" kids to neighborhoods in which they will again be exposed to the gang environment that plagues our communities;
- > Allow correctional and rehabilitative services for children to be turned over to private, for-profit corporations with no state or legislative monitoring of cost or service delivery;
- > Return dangerous, felonious juvenile offenders to our communities with inadequate treatment, supervision or aftercare.

If passed, these bills will dismantle the system of checks and balances now in place that regulates and monitors the treatment of youth.

Please phone Representative Morris Hood, Jr., Chair of the House Appropriations Committee at 517-373-3815 and urge him to TAKE NO ACTION on these bills. Also contact your State Representative and urge him or her NOT to support this legislation.

If only world could be like Olympics

It's hard not to like the Olympics. Perhaps you're not a big fan of some of the events going on in Nagano, Japan, during the Winter Games and there are certainly a few events that are hard for all but the truly committed to get excited about. But the Olympics has always been about a lot more than just sporting events and the topnotch athletes who participate in them. The Olympics may be the only global event that even semisuccessfully manages to bring together the people of the world not the governments but the people - on a regular basis. That fact alone makes it one of the most important ongoing events on the planet.

Japan's Emperor Akihito declared the Nagano Olympics open more than a week ago. Nagano is the third city in Japan to host the Olympics, following the 1964 Summer Games in Tokyo and the 1972 Winter Games in Sapporo. A record 72 countries are participating in this year's Winter Games, which have already fulfilled their promise of being the largest winter sports extravaganza of all time. An estimated 2,400 athletes are competing for Olympic honors in 68 events, easily surpassing the previous record 1,739 athletes who took part in 61 sports events four years ago in Lillehammer, Norway.

During the opening ceremonies, which were beamed to 160 countries, the world's people were treated to a spectacular musical accomplishment when renowned Japanese conductor Seiji Ozawa led a live global chorus performance of Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" by 200 singers each in Sydney, Australia, New York, Beijing, Berlin and Cape Point near Cape Town in South Africa, linked by broadcasting satellite Nagano. In case you hadn't noticed, each city is on a different conti-

The technological wonder of what Ozawa managed to do was incredible enough. But hearing the world's people singing such a beautiful song together was enough to make one consider not giving up hope on the desire of humanity to be at peace — and as one. Some of the elected and self-appointed leaders of humanity may have a problem with such a radical concept as global cooperation and mutual respect, but it would at least be nice to think that most average people would prefer to, well, sing in harmony.

Just imagine if the Olympics could take the place of wars. For once, rather than loading up on smart bombs and whatever other gadgets military leaders have been itching to use, differences between nations could be settled by athletic competition. The nation with the ability to win the most events wins the war. Nobody dies. The team — or soldiers — would simply pack up their gear at war's end and return home for further training until the next war.

Sure the idea sounds crazy. Some might say it's not too far-removed from the Pollyanna school of thought. Sounds like something those folks over at Disney might cook up. And admittedly, most would agree that sporting wars will probably never happen. Then again, some might say the idea of war — as in slaughtering other human beings to achieve peace — is a little crazy, too, when you stop to think about it.

The problem is not enough of us stop to think about it.

Journal story a whitewash

I was upset by the Journal's whitewash of the challenge to affirmative action at the University of Michigan ("Maize and blue, black and white," Feb. 1). Make no mistake. State Sen. David Jaye, one of the primary instigators of this suit, is no friend of civil rights or workers' rights. Nor are his partners in this effort. Apparently the writer of this article was not in Michigan during Jaye's recent campaign for the Michigan Senate, which saw Jaye use racist accusations against his opponents.

The Journal article quotes Jaye attacking Michigan's affirmative action policies as racist and imposed by "bullies," without once mentioning Jaye's own ultraright politics and bullying tactics. At best this is shoddy journalism; at worse it's complicity with the effort to conceal the racist nature of the lawsuit against affirmative action. The article portrays the Washington-based organization behind this suit and others, the Center for Individual Rights, as some grassroots operation "funded by donations." Like fives and 10s from retirees or bingo nights? I don't think so.

Linda Chavez, an ex-Reagan appointee who tried to thwart civil rights initiatives while on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, is heavily involved in the U-M challenge. Her organization is cleverly named the Center for Equal Opportunity. The focus of her "center" for "equal opportunity" is to eliminate affirmative action. One thing the conservatives have mastered is naming their organizations and challenges after the things they are trying to destroy—such as the "Right to Work" committee that opposes unions.

That's what's really disappointing about the thrust of this article. Politicians such as David Jaye try hard to portray their race-baiting, anti-union, cold-hearted brand of politics as mainstream and reasonable. I don't expect the two dailies to care much about the motives and impact behind these conservative politicians. I thought that a proworker, union-backed paper would have a better grasp of the issues and the politicians behind them.

U-M President Lee Bollinger is right to defend affirmative action. Despite the tremendous progress that has been made since the enactment of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, discrimination is alive and well in our country. In many places it's just more subtle and cleaned up, such as the subtle support for the conservative campaign against civil rights contained in the Journal's affirmative action article.

EMU on slow, downhill slide

By Ken Wachsberger Special to the Journal

ne day, as the story goes, Eastern Michigan University Col. Stephens came to campus for what was described as a "white glove" visit. Staff in the buildings he visited were warned two days ahead of time so they could clean up their office spaces and dust their equipment. When the colonel arrived, he ran his fingertips across the flat surfaces, announced that all was well and left. "He didn't talk to us or learn about what we do or what problems need attention. He just came through the building.'

The story was told to me as an example of how out of touch with campus reality the regents are. Another more pitiful example is President William Shelton's $22,500 raise.

I've taught at EMU for 10 years. I've seen its downhill slide and feel sad. The regents laud the president's performance and give him credit for expanding the EMU empire by two additional buildings. But the infrastructure is rumbling.

According to campus personnel:

■ There is no regular maintenance schedule for major equipment.

■ There is no budget with which to replace the obsolete mainframe database system and the hardware that supports data processing.

■ Classroom buildings freeze in winter and in summer because of faulty heating and cooling systems.

No campus phone directories are available until winter term.

The university has been cited by the Michigan Occupational and Safety Administration more than 200 times in two years.

Rest rooms are filthy in classroom buildings, but not in the administration's Welch Hall; elevator failures occur regularly; and clocks are out of sync because of cuts in the custodial staff.

■ The steam tunnel support systems are on the verge of collapse.

Morale is at an all-time low among teaching and nonteaching employees. On more than one occasion I have heard veteran employees evoke memories of former President John Porter taking walks on campus and greeting members of the community.

Nowadays people ask, "Is anybody there?" The fact that EMU President Shelton was out of town when President Bill Clinton visited EMU during election season comes to mind. It was an embarrassment to the campus community. The whispers were

As personnel throughout the campus community ask for incremental their students and in their own modest lifestyles, they are either ignored or pummeled with the full force of EMU's high-priced outside lawyers.

The issue is dignity. Teachers, for instance, don't enter the profession with visions of gold in their eyes. The saying "they're only in it for the money" never is applied to teachers. Their goal is to teach our children, to do good for society. They are commuing that they are - of all things - "casu-nity people and taxpayers. They want to be appreciated. When they are denied paid leaves for occasional sick days or jury duty, and when they have no vehicle through which to redress their grievances, who suffers? The students and taxpay-

buildings, but not in the

administration's

Welch Hall.

Across the country in all professions, there is a movement to fire or retire full-timers and replace them with part-timers. At EMU, nontenuretrack teaching staff are called lecturers. Two half-time lecturers cost less than one full-time tenure-track teacher because they are paid less per class and don't receive benefits. This is called "saving the taxpayers money." What it means is lecturers have to teach extra classes living to earn wages. Then they have to teach additional classes to pay for the benefits they were deprived of because they aren't full time.

Because those classes won't be offered at EMU. they are forced to teach at other campuses. It is not surprising to have lecturers teaching up to eight classes at three campuses, spread out over the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti-Livonia-Detroit area. Even lecturers who teach half-time in two different departments at EMU are denied full-time benefits. Meanwhile, lecturers from other campuses commute to EMU for the same reasons. These "gypsy scholars," as they are many well-published and with PhDs — prep for classes as they pass each other on the road. They have less time to hold office hours. They are tired and demoralized.

News' editorial unfair to council

Although I neither subscribe to nor read the Detroit News, someone showed me a copy of its editorial of Sunday, Feb. 1, 1998: "A Question of Leadership."

That editorial not only criticized Council President Gil Hill, but also could not resist the opportunity to attack both of his distinguished predecessors, Erma Henderson and Maryann Mahaffey. President Hill was criticized for allegedly failing to stop a public hearing on casinos at which many persons disagreed with Mayor Archer's casino decisions. Hill was also pilloried for not supporting the city administration's plan to change the city pension system.

Apparently, the Detroit News welcomes only Detroit City Council leadership that agrees with it biases. The News should surely understand that the Detroit City Council president cannot alone decide whether council should or should not conduct any public hearing. That decision belongs to the council majority at any given time. Insofar as stopping or preventing a public hearing merely because those who attend criticize one or another public official, well, that style of "democracy" is found in China and in other totalitarian countries, not in Detroit.

Regarding the pension issue, although the city administration brought its Defined Contribution plan to the council for the third time in less than a year, it was still basically flawed and a threat to the viability of the present pension system. It deserved its 8-1 defeat.

For the News to suggest that in against the Defined Contribution proposal, the council majority "caved in" to the pressure of the present system's supporters is to disparage the independent judgment of the majority of council members.

It appears that whenever its peculiar biases are not served at whatever level of government, the Detroit News is wont to cry "cave in" based on someone's pressure.

I expect the current council members to evaluate each issue on its merits and in terms of the maximum benefit for the people of Detroit. If that approach does not agree with the political preference of the News, I trust it will improve life for the citizens of our city.

EMU on slow, downhill slide

By Ken Wachsberger Special to the Journal

ne day, as the story goes, Eastern Michigan University Col. Stephens came to campus for what was described as a "white glove" visit. Staff in the buildings he visited were warned two days ahead of time so they could clean up their office spaces and dust their equipment. When the colonel arrived, he ran his fingertips across the flat surfaces, announced that all was well and left. "He didn't talk to us or learn about what we do or what problems need attention. He just came through the building.'

The story was told to me as an example of how out of touch with campus reality the regents are. Another more pitiful example is President William Shelton's $22,500 raise.

I've taught at EMU for 10 years. I've seen its downhill slide and feel sad. The regents laud the president's performance and give him credit for expanding the EMU empire by two additional buildings. But the infrastructure is rumbling.

According to campus personnel:

■ There is no regular maintenance schedule for major equipment.

There is no budget with which to replace the obsolete mainframe database system and the hardware that supports data processing.

■ Classroom buildings freeze in winter and in summer because of faulty heating and cooling systems.

No campus phone directories are available until winter term.

The university has been cited by the Michigan Occupational and Safety Administration more than 200 times in two years.

Rest rooms are filthy in classroom buildings, but not in the administration's Welch Hall; elevator failures occur regularly; and clocks are out of sync because of cuts in the custodial staff.

■ The steam tunnel support systems are on the verge of collapse.

Morale is at an all-time low among teaching and nonteaching employees. On more than one occasion I have heard veteran employees evoke memories of former President John Porter taking walks on campus and greeting members of the community.

Nowadays people ask, "Is anybody there?" The fact that EMU President Shelton was out of town when President Bill Clinton visited EMU during election season comes to mind. It was an embarrassment to the campus community. The whispers were

The issue is dignity. Teachers, for instance, don't enter the profession with visions of gold in their eyes. The saying "they're only in it for the money" never is applied to teachers. Their goal is to teach our children, to do good for society. They are commuing that they are - of all things - "casu-nity people and taxpayers. They want to be appreciated. When they are denied paid leaves for occasional sick days or jury duty, and when they have no vehicle through which to redress their grievances, who suffers? The students and taxpay-

buildings, but

not in the

Welch Hall.

Across the country in all professions, there is a movement to fire or retire full-timers and replace them with part-timers. At EMU, nontenuretrack teaching staff are called lecturers. Two half-time lecturers cost less than one full-time tenure-track teacher because they are paid less per class and don't receive benefits. This is called "saving the taxpayers money." What it means is lecturers have to > teach extra classes living to earn wages. Then they have to teach additional classes to pay for the benefits they were deprived of because they aren't full time.

> Because those classes won't be offered at EMU. they are forced to teach at other campuses. It is not surprising to have lecturers teaching up to eight classes at three campuses, spread out over the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti-Livonia-Detroit area. Even lecturers who teach half-time in two different departments at EMU are denied full-time benefits. Meanwhile, lecturers from other campuses commute to EMU for the same reasons. These "gypsy scholars," as they are many well-published and with PhDs — prep for classes as they pass each other on the road. They have less time to hold office hours.
